

Luis David Villarreal

Luis Villarreal is the managing member of ACTOMAS LLC. ACTOMAS LLC is a government consulting firm specializing in supply chain management.

Mr. Villarreal has over 38 years of professional experience designing process improvement for supply chain and production operations. His experience includes work with private industry at a major defense contractor, government experience in the field and at headquarters, and community service experience with public schools.

Mr. Villarreal retired from the Department of Defense in 2022. His government career included 17 years as the Program Manager for the Defense Logistics Agency Industrial Capability and Warstopper Program. Mr. Villarreal's transformed a niche DLA budget item into a comprehensive industrial readiness program that significantly contributes to our nation's industrial readiness strategy. He executed nearly $1 Billion of investments to ensure industry can meet the Department's go-to-war requirement for critical defense items. This included highly successful investments in personal protection equipment that provided the DoD a strategic buffer of critically needed materials during the peaks of the COVID-19 pandemic, and which was recognized as a department best practice by senior DOD officials and members of Congress.

Mr. Villarreal has a Bachelor of Science Degree in Industrial Engineering from the University of Texas, El Paso and a master's degree in business administration from Pepperdine University in Malibu, California.
